Eiffage renews its partnership with Finalcad and continues the digital transformation of its activities

Eiffage is extending for several years a partnership agreement entered into in 2017 with Finalcad covering all of its business lines. The Group is thus renewing its trust in Finalcad to support it in the digital transformation of its construction sites in an open innovation approach.

The solution developed by Finalcad has been deployed on more than 5,000 projects in the Group with the objective, in the long term, of equipping all employees working in the field. This objective will enable everyone at their level to participate in the Group's digital transformation.

Through the renewal of this partnership, Eiffage aims to intensify synergies between business lines on sites that call uses of several of its areas of expertise, while opening up a field of analysis and use of the data collected.

The Finalcad solution allows for global and paperless monitoring of all phases of the project, enabling the teams in the field to coordinate all the participants. It guarantees better operational management and, as a result, optimises the quality of projects delivered.

In this way, Eiffage is continuing the process of digitalising its activities that began several years ago. In addition to increasing the use of BIM in project design, the Group is integrating both proprietary and open source solutions to improve its performance.

About Eiffage
